Market Review

Malaysian government bond yields increased in tandem with US Treasuries as US unemployment rate dropped to 4.2%, the lowest level since February 2001, fanning speculations of more interest rate tightening in the future. Anticipation of some form of President Trump's tax cut to eventually come into fruition also fuelled the sell-offs. Foreign flows once again turned negative in October, with net outflow of MYR2.8 billion following MYR9.3 billion of inflow in September possibly due to sizeable MGS maturities during the month and MYR weakening against USD. This translated into a drop in foreign holdings from 27.8% in September to 27.6% in October.

The Malaysian equity market was mixed in October with the wider FBM100 Index up by 0.4% but the blue-chip FBM KLCI Index was down by 0.4%. October saw net foreign outflows of about RM300m, marking the third consecutive month of outflows. Energy outperformed during the month led by Tenaga Nasional on its higher than expected dividend while oil and gas was driven up by higher oil prices. Banking sector underperformed led by the fall of the bigger banks. The 2018 Budget did not contain any surprises with the government announcing measures to address the rising cost of living while reiterating its commitment to implement infrastructure projects.

Asian equity markets rebounded strongly in October with the MSCI Asia ex Japan Index up by 5.0% in MYR terms. China's equity market rose as President Xi Jinping secured his political primacy for the foreseeable future at the Communist Party Congress, which could suggest that the planned structural reforms will continue. South Korea market was up supported by news that it has normalise relationship with China following the recent fallout over the installation of US anti-missile system. India also posted robust return as the government announced a major plan to recapitalise state-owned banks which will speed up the resolution of their bad debts.

Market Outlook

For fixed income, the slightly narrower fiscal deficit as tabled in the 2018 Budget should lend support to the bond market over the near term. On the external front, any hawkish remarks by major central banks will likely weigh on the sentiment of regional bond markets, including Malaysia's.

For equity, the positive tone in global markets could continue given the robust economic data that has been coming out from the US and the strong earnings reported by technology giants. With the new Chair of the US Federal Reserve named, markets will now focus on President Trump's tax reform plans. On the local front, with the Budget tabled, investors will likely switch attention to the upcoming results season to see whether earnings momentum picks up.
