Market Review

MYR extended its losses in September with a 4.8% depreciation to close at MYR4.3950 on the back of USD strength. BNM maintained the OPR in the September MPC meeting with a bearish tone on growth outlook. The sovereign sukuk market rebounded at the longer end of the curve having seen better bidding interest by investors. Towards the month end, the market gained in reaction to Governor Zeti's speech to indicate the strength of Malaysia's bond market to intermediate offshore capital outflows. Corporate sukuk trading activities were light during the month, where investors were net sellers in the secondary market. Yields trended higher amid thin market volumes despite the rebound in the sovereign sukuk market.

During the month, FBM Shariah Index recovered 3.89% to end the month at 11,889, outperforming MSCI Asia ex-Japan, which rose 2.42% in MYR term. The rebound was mainly driven by the news that the Government was allocating RM20bil to ValueCap to buy stocks but gave up some of its gains after the Federal Reserve decided to keep interest rate unchanged. Plantation stocks ended higher this month propelled by a 20% rally in crude palm oil price which rose to RM2,300/tonne level on the back strengthening El Nino and haze effect. Ringgit continued to depreciate by another 4.8% to touch a record high of MYR4.45/USD despite higher foreign reserves which rose from US$94.7bil at end-Aug 2015 to US$95.3bil at mid-Sep 2015.

Market Outlook

For fixed income, we expect the volatility of the Ringgit and commodity prices to remain until there is clearer sign of the global growth outlook, supply/demand dynamics from OPEC on crude oil as well as the political front. The GII market is expected to trade range bound as some downside risk remains.

For local equity, in the short run, we expect some pullback as market has rallied by 6% since mid-August but downside risk is capped by Government effort to stabilize Ringgit, improving oil prices and CPO prices. Over the medium term, we are optimistic on the market recovery, supporting by the still-strong economic fundamentals, successful fiscal consolidation, 1MDB restructuring and strengthening Ringgit to support the market. We believe Ringgit will recover if the US rate hike is done on a slow and gradual basis.
