Market Review

Malaysian government bonds rallied in August, tracking US Treasury gains and weaker USD against MYR as investors adjusted to the possibility of a slower pace of US interest rate hike. Nevertheless, foreign holdings in Malaysian government bonds still recorded a net outflow of RM1.1bn in August (July: RM1.5bn net outflow). This translated into a decline of foreign holdings from 26.5% in July to 26.4% in August. On the economic front, Malaysia's 2Q 2017 GDP growth came in at 5.8% y-o-y, beating market expectation and 1Q 2017 growth of 5.6% y-o-y. Private consumption remained the key driver of the economy, increasing by 7.1% y-o-y while exports also continued to be healthy, growing at 9.6% y-o-y as global economic growth remained robust.

For equity, the Malaysian market was flattish in August though the FBM Emas Shariah Index increased by 0.3% for the month driven up on the last day by a number of stocks in the index. Foreign net inflows continued to ease, coming in at RM0.24bn versus RM0.42bn in July. Market sentiment was impacted by North Korea geopolitical issue and uncertainty over the policy direction of the US government. The 2Q 2017 results season was lacklustre with more companies reported earnings which were below expectation compared to the first quarter. In terms of share price performance, key oil and gas heavyweights underperformed during the month, while defensive stocks such as telcos outperformed.

Market Outlook

For fixed income, escalating geopolitical tensions might lead to a flight from emerging markets. In addition, if US jobs market strengthens or GDP growth improves for 3Q 2017, investors might start to expect a quicker pace of US interest rate hike, leading to a weaker MYR and higher Malaysian government bond yields. That said, spreads between Malaysian and developed market bond yields continue to remain in favour of domestic bond market.

For equity, since the beginning of September, the MYR has strengthened, driven by foreign fund inflows into the bond market as well as the weakening USD which was impacted by a combination of issues, ranging from North Korea and hurricane damage to the policy direction of the US Federal Reserve. We believe these factors will continue to impact the sentiment of the equity market going forward. Stocks which will benefit or lose out from a strengthening MYR could also be in focus.
