Government Investment Issue ("GII") closed mixed in Nov 2018 with some selling pressure seen on the front end of the benchmark curve on profit taking by investors, while strong buying interest was seen on the 10Y GII partly due to index rebalancing flows. Market generally traded in thin liquidity during the month on the back of subdued crude oil prices and continued budget deficit concerns. USDMYR remained unchanged during the month at MYR4.1842.

November was another difficult month for the FBMS Index as it fell 1.2% MoM, partly due to a disappointing 3Q18 result season and the ongoing foreign selling. This brought YTD losses to 12.6%. Sectorwise, Property was a clear gainer while Plantation and Technology were laggards. Foreigners remained net sellers in the market with a net outflow of MYR0.7 billion, bringing YTD net foreign selling to MYR10.6 billion. Average trading value was MYR2.1 billion, relatively unchanged from last month. The key events during the month were the announcement of Budget 2019 and the US mid-term election where the Democrats took control of the House of Representatives. On the corporate front, key news included Moody's downgrade of Petronas' domestic issuer and foreign currency senior unsecured ratings outlook from stable to negative and the inking of a termination and settlement agreement between MRCB and the government in relation to the Eastern Dispersal Link Expressway.

Market Outlook

In the near term, uncertainties surrounding domestic government policies, trade disputes between major economies and global monetary policy tightening remain. We believe the local sukuk market should be well supported on the back of solid domestic fundamentals and ample onshore liquidity.

The Malaysian equity market will likely remain volatile in the near term given the concerns over the ongoing trade tension between US and China and its implications on global growth. Locally, investors are watching out for Pakatan Harapan's policy execution and fiscal management. However, the new ruling coalition's promise of better governance, transparency and accountability should bode well for the domestic business environment and local equity market over the long term.
